

14, October, 2011
Embassy of Japan in South Africa

The handing over of messages to the Japanese children affected by the Great East Japan Earthquake by children from the “Children of Fire Trust”.

On Wednesday, 12th October, thirteen children from the “Children of Fire Trust” visited the Embassy of Japan to hand over messages to encourage the Japanese children affected by the Great East Japan Earthquake. Minister Hideyuki Sakamoto received their messages on behalf of the Embassy.

Children of Fire Trust is an organization which runs care center for children who are affected by fire disasters.

Their messages will be delivered to the devastated areas in Tohoku this month by a former participant of the JET Programme.

